Question: 1. (a) What is religion? Explain it.

Answer: Religion is an organized system of beliefs and worship, whose foundation is the divine message. It teaches a human being the principles of living, high moral values and the difference between right and wrong, and gives him peace and contentment.

Question: 2. (a) What is the concept of psychology? Describe it.

Answer: Psychology is the science of the human mind and behaviour. It helps in understanding a person's thoughts, feelings, emotions and reactions, and develops the ability to understand a person's inner thoughts and outer feelings.

Question: 3. (a) What is the difference between religious upbringing and ordinary upbringing?

Answer: Religious upbringing is based on principles and teaches a person to understand the beliefs of others correctly, whereas ordinary upbringing lacks that religious guidance. Religious upbringing broadens a person's thinking and makes him a friend to every human being.

Question: 1. (b) "The foundation of the teachings of religions is the divine message" — explain this statement.

Answer: The foundation of the teachings of every religion is the divine message, that is, the message that came from the True Owner for the guidance of human beings. That is why in every religion the difference between good and evil, right and wrong, truth and falsehood, crime and sin is taught, and a person should not oppose his Owner.

Question: 2. (b) What are the differences between religion and psychology? Describe them.

Answer: Religion helps with moral principles and rules, whereas psychology helps in understanding feelings and emotions. Religion shows a person the purpose of life and teaches gratitude for the blessings of the True Owner, whereas psychology teaches a person to live according to his conscience and society. Religion gives a person spiritual peace, whereas psychology helps in understanding the problems of a person's life in an orderly way. Religion tells about right and wrong and reward and punishment, whereas psychology creates in a person the awareness of the difference between right and wrong.

Question: 1. (a) What is the definition of ethics?

Answer: Ethics is the science that tells what is right and what is wrong for an individual or a society. The word "Ethics" is taken from the Greek word "Ethos", which means custom, habit, character and the God-given ability of correct use.

Question: 2. (a) Who presented the theory of deontological ethics?

Answer: The theory of deontological ethics was presented by the German philosopher Immanuel Kant. His view was that the foundation of ethics is natural law and that good intention is necessary in every act of a person.

Question: 3. (a) What is meant by secular ethics?

Answer: Secular ethics means those ethics which decide about the worth of actions through human perception, moral conscience, mental ability and reason, and for which connection with any religion is not necessary. In it, only humanity and free thinking and following principles are encouraged.

Question: 4. (a) What is the difference between religious and secular ethics?

Answer: In religious ethics, emphasis is laid in religious books on following moral principles, whereas in secular ethics moral values are viewed separately from religion. Religious ethics is connected with religion, whereas secular ethics is separate from state affairs, church, temple or other religious institutions.

Question: 5. (a) Write the names of any two books written about secular ethics.

Answer: (1) Immanuel Kant's book "Groundwork of the Metaphysics of Morals". (2) Friedrich Nietzsche's book "On the Genealogy of Morals".

Question: 1. (b) Describe ethics and its types in detail.

Answer: Ethics is the science that tells what is right and what is wrong for an individual or a society. Its five main types are: (1) Virtue Ethics: in it, high character and honest thinking are necessary for every act. (2) Consequentialist Ethics: in it, the good or bad result of an act is looked at. (3) Deontological Ethics: in it, every act is done under duty and consciousness, and doing justice is necessary. (4) Religious Ethics: in it, human action is viewed from the religious point of view and compared with religious teachings and customs. (5) Secular Ethics: in it, actions are judged by human perception, moral conscience, mental ability and reason, and connection with any religion is not necessary.

Question: 2. (b) What is the importance of religion from the social and moral point of view?

Answer: From the social and moral point of view, the role of religion is very important. Religion gives a person social training, reduces social evils such as theft, robbery, intoxication and other social evils, and plays a role in moral and cultural development. Every religion teaches the lesson of protecting life, property and honour, urges a person to walk on the true path, teaches giving charity, forbids hoarding and unlawful profit, and teaches high moral values, love, brotherhood and respect. That is why religion is not a problem, but the solution to problems.

Question: 1. (a) What is hoarding?

Answer: Hoarding means collecting and storing things so that an artificial shortage is created in the market and prices rise. According to the lesson, a major cause of crisis is hoarding.

Question: 2. (a) What is the meaning of crisis?

Answer: Crisis means that difficult situation which arises in a country or society due to some cause, such as shortage of things, rising prices, or the spread of an epidemic, by which common people are affected.

Question: 3. (a) What is the difference between a national and a global crisis?

Answer: A national crisis is limited to one country, whereas a global crisis affects the whole world. For example, the coronavirus epidemic was a global crisis, which closed businesses all over the world and many countries became victims of economic crisis.

Question: 4. (a) Give examples of some crises of the modern age by which people were affected.

Answer: Examples of crises of the modern age: the coronavirus epidemic, due to which businesses closed all over the world; the inflation crisis, in which prices of things rose; and the economic crisis, in which people's employment ended.

Question: 5. (a) What guidance does religion give in solving crises?

Answer: Religion gives this guidance in solving crises: it teaches fear of the True Owner, patriotism and the spirit of general welfare; it teaches patience, tolerance and self-reliance; it creates unity, national thinking and social consciousness; and it stops evils like hoarding. In religious books, the solution to every crisis and every problem is present.

Question: 1. (b) How did the teacher explain the meaning of crisis?

Answer: The teacher explained the meaning of crisis with the example of wheat: when landlords hoard wheat, an artificial shortage is created in the market, prices rise and common people fall into difficulty. This very situation is called a crisis.

Question: 2. (b) What are the causes of crises?

Answer: The causes of crises are various: natural calamities, artificial shortage, hoarding, inflation, spread of epidemics and unlawful activities. For example, due to the coronavirus epidemic, economic crisis arose all over the world.

Question: 3. (b) In your opinion, how should any crisis be ended?

Answer: According to the lesson, any crisis can be ended in these ways: common people should act with patience and tolerance; evils like hoarding should be stopped; landlords should bring their produce to the common market according to government law; the government should establish a better system of check and balance in society; and the solution to every crisis should be obtained from the guidance of religious books.

Question: 1. (a) What is called a major sin?

Answer: A major sin is that great sin for which severe punishment is told in religious books, that evil which is repeated again and again, and for which no repentance is made before death. Such a person remains away from the mercy of the True Owner until he repents from evils.

Question: 2. (a) What is the meaning of original sin?

Answer: Original sin means the disobedience of Hazrat Adam (peace be upon him). The True Owner had forbidden him from a tree in Paradise, but he ate its fruit. That disobedience is called the original sin, and because of it man was sent from Paradise to the earth.

Question: 3. (a) Why is man called the "home of error"?

Answer: Man is called the "home of error" because man can commit error. There is a famous saying that man is the home of error, meaning that error or mistake can occur from every human being, and errors also have degrees.

Question: 4. (a) How does "crime" become sin?

Answer: Not every crime is a sin, but when a crime becomes severe and is committed again and again, it becomes a sin. Apart from that, a crime that happens by mistake or unintentionally can also be considered a sin.

Question: 5. (a) In your view, how can society be saved from crimes and sins?

Answer: According to the lesson, society can be saved from crimes and sins in this way: religious education should be followed, law should be respected, criminals should be given prescribed punishment, repentance should be made from sins, and awareness should be created in society through campaigns like "corruption unacceptable" and "tobacco use unacceptable".

Question: 1. (b) What is the concept of sin in religions?

Answer: The concept of all religions is that sin is violation of the commands of the True Owner or religious rules. In Islam, lying, gossiping, greed, lust, luxury-seeking, backbiting, ingratitude, drinking alcohol, etc. are counted as sins. In Christianity, acts like pride, greed, anger, jealousy, laziness and overeating are sins. In Sanatan Dharma, greed, anger, attachment, pride, jealousy, gambling and usurping others' rights are counted as sins.

Question: 2. (b) Describe the difference between crime and sin.

Answer: Sin is violation of the command of the True Owner, whereas crime is violation of the current law of the country or state. Forgiveness of sin is possible, because if the sinner admits his sin, seeks forgiveness and makes a firm resolve not to do it again, the True Owner can forgive him. But severe punishments are prescribed for crime and forgiveness is not obtained by mere repentance; respecting the law is necessary so that crimes may end.

Question: 3. (b) What are those acts which are counted as sin in all religions?

Answer: Those acts which are counted as sin in all religions are: telling lies, stealing, being greedy, lust, getting angry, being jealous, being proud, backbiting, being ungrateful, drinking alcohol and usurping others' rights.

Question: 1. (a) What is piety?

Answer: Piety means doing good deeds for the True Owner, remaining firm on one's belief in good and bad times, keeping one's thoughts, actions and behaviour pure, controlling desires, respecting others, and remembering the True Owner every moment.

Question: 2. (a) What will did Alexander the Great make?

Answer: Alexander the Great, in the last breath of his life, made this will: after death, keep his hands outside the shroud, so that the world may see that he went from the world empty-handed. His purpose was to make people understand that the world is a guest house, and man comes empty-handed and goes empty-handed.

Question: 3. (a) What is the purpose of a clemency appeal?

Answer: The purpose of a clemency appeal is to request that a convict's punishment be forgiven or reduced. It is the right of a punished person to make a request for mercy, and the governor can accept that request and forgive or reduce the punishment.

Question: 4. (a) What is the concept of sympathy in religions?

Answer: The concept of religions is that sympathy is the foundation of every religion. In the holy books, the instruction of sympathy is not only with human beings but with all creation — with animals, birds and plants too. The principle is that "he who does not show mercy to others will also not be shown mercy".

Question: 1. (b) Describe the meaning and concept of piety in detail.

Answer: Piety means doing good deeds for the True Owner, remaining firm on one's belief in good and bad times, keeping one's thoughts, actions and behaviour pure, controlling desires, respecting others, sacrificing for the country and nation, and remembering the True Owner every moment and loving His creation. All the religions of the world give great importance to piety. In Islam, the measure of a person's superiority is his piety. In Christianity, the True Owner is believed to be One, and in Sanatan Dharma, Buddhism and Jainism, emphasis is laid on charity, control of desires and mercy.

Question: 2. (b) Write clearly the meaning of compassion.

Answer: Compassion (Mercy) means that a person has mercy and kindness for another human being and other creation. Compassion means that, feeling the sorrows and sufferings of others, they are helped in every way. The difference between mercy and sympathy is that mercy is kindness to the poor, orphans, the sick and the needy, whereas sympathy is considering others' sorrow as one's own sorrow and helping.

Question: 3. (b) Write the benefits and harms of sympathy.

Answer: Benefits of sympathy: love, peace and cooperation increase in society, the needy are helped, and a person's moral and spiritual progress takes place. Harms of sympathy: doing sympathy beyond limits causes harm, because the one who is given charity beyond limits becomes habitual of it and goes away from hard work, which creates social problems. That is why caution is necessary in sympathy.

Question: 1. (a) Define accountability.

Answer: Accountability means answerability of responsibility. The concept of accountability is that a person accepts responsibility for his actions and gives account of it to the higher authority or supervisory institution. A person should understand his duty and explain how he performed it and what results were obtained.

Question: 2. (a) What is self-accountability?

Answer: Self-accountability is that psychological test of a person that before sleeping he reviews his day's deeds, habits and character. He sees how many good deeds he did during the day and how many bad deeds he did. He feels ashamed of bad habits, and praises himself for good deeds, and prepares his mind to change his bad habits.

Question: 3. (a) Describe any five benefits of accountability.

Answer: Five benefits of accountability are these: (1) The feeling of responsibility is created in a person. (2) A person performs his duty with heart and soul. (3) Correct decisions are taken according to need. (4) Institutions and employees achieve prescribed targets. (5) Self-confidence is created and corruption ends.

Question: 4. (a) Who has the authority of accountability?

Answer: The authority of accountability is with the government, the high authorities, and the supervisors and heads. And in the hereafter, the True Owner Himself will take accountability from every person for his deeds.

Question: 5. (a) Can the head of the household do accountability?

Answer: Yes, the head of the household can do accountability. Accountability is necessary at every level — in the home, in the office and in society. The head of the household can take account from his family members for their responsibilities.

Question: 1. (b) Why is accountability necessary in society?

Answer: Accountability is necessary in society because through accountability the feeling of responsibility is created in a person, he performs his duty with heart and soul, takes correct decisions according to need, and institutions achieve their targets. If there were no accountability, a person would become heedless of his responsibility and corruption would increase in society.

Question: 2. (b) Explain the role of religions regarding accountability.

Answer: The role of religions is that according to the holy books of all the religions of the world, every person has to give account of the deeds done during his life to the True Owner after death. That is why every person should remain ready for the accountability of his deeds. Religion teaches a person that he should fulfil his given responsibility honestly, because in the hereafter there will be an account of it.
